

3 tips to improve your candidate experience -
trust me, it matters!

Tip 1

Show the individual that they matter to you

Don't be late for the interview or be distracted. This leaves a lasting negative impression. We've had feedback from candidates that the interviewer didn't seem prepared and clearly hadn't taken time to look at their profile. We know you are busy but give the individual the attention they deserve.

Tip 2

Support your Managers

Don't assume that your Managers know how to conduct a thorough interview. They could be awesome to work for but without the right support and training, they could put a great candidate off. Take a look at our interview tips for managers here

Tip 3

Stay front of mind

If your interview process is going slower than you anticipated, keep your candidate up to date, share something useful if possible to keep them engaged. After all, the strong candidates will be interviewing elsewhere and the experience they have with you matters.
